The Alpine environment is one of the most pristine environments in Australia. It contains a number of unique flora and fauna species. Threats include the invasion of weed species, which can travel great distances on the tyres of vehicles and the underneath of footwear, and feral animals attacking local fauna.

The Alpine Bog Alpine Bogs are rare in Australia; they can be defined as a permanently wet area of ground that supports a range of flora and fauna. Alpine Bogs are an iconic part of the Australian landscape.

Snowgum forests take many years to establish and the growth rate of the snowgum is very slow. Many fauna species live in snowgum forests. Snowgum survival is threatened by development and
